

FOR MEMBERS' USE ONLY

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE MICROBIOLOGICAL SAFETY OF FOOD

THE INFECTIOUS INTESTINAL DISEASE (IID) STUDY OF ENGLAND

Draft long-term follow-up study report

1. In the context of the ACMSF's horizon scanning exercise, Members noted as important the chronic sequelae of foodborne infection. The Secretariat was asked to seek information from the Food Standards Agency on any work undertaken as part of the IID study to follow up on this question.
2. The attached draft report is provided for the information of Members. The researchers are intending to publish the study data in the near future and Members are therefore asked to treat the draft report as confidential in the meantime.

Secretariat
September 2002

The Infectious Intestinal Disease Study of England : Draft long-term follow-up study report.

This report has not yet been finalised but will be published by the Food Standards Agency as soon as possible.